Everglades To You (EG2U) program returns to Donna Klein by popular demand

For the third year in a row, the Marshall Foundation returned in November to the Donna Klein Jewish Academy in Boca Raton to deliver its Everglades To You education program to fourth grade students. They learned about the history of the Everglades ecosystem, how humans have altered the Everglades, and the value of wetlands. The next day, Marshall Foundation Education Director, Eric Gehring, provided a custom-designed Field Experience for the students in a Cypress Tree preserve on the Academy campus, where approximately 60 students investigated adaptations of wetland trees and plants right in their own schoolyard. "Learning doesn't end at the classroom door," said Gehring. "This cypress preserve is a wonderful outdoor classroom."
