

Taste

Paris Magnifique

Paris may be 4,530 miles away, but thanks to The Parisian in Jupiter, the City of Light couldn't feel closer. Owner Tarzi Benazzouz's bustling, year-old French brasserie takes diners on an epicurean journey with authentic delights like mussels marinière, served in a white wine, onion, and garlic broth so decadent you'll tip the bowl for the last drop. Each dish reflects chef Christophe Abadie's expertise, having worked with some of France's top chefs, including Gérard Sallé and Alain Ducasse. But it's his sweeter masterpieces that make that extra workout worthwhile. We recommend the ethereal chocolate mousse or the St. Honoré cake (pictured), made with puff pastry filled with pastry cream and topped with homemade Chantilly cream, caramelized sugar, and hot dark chocolate. (561-360-2224, theparisianrestaurant.com) —Kerry Shorr

Paris Magnifique

Paris may be 4,530 miles away, but thanks to The Parisian in Jupiter, the City of Light couldn't feel closer. Owner Tarzi Benazzouz's bustling, year-old French brasserie takes diners on an epicurean journey with authentic delights like mussels marinière, served in a white wine, onion, and garlic broth so decadent you'll tip the bowl for the last drop. Each dish reflects chef Christophe Abadie's expertise, having worked with some of France's top chefs, including Gérard Sallé and Alain Ducasse. But it's his sweeter masterpieces that make that extra workout worthwhile. We recommend the ethereal chocolate mousse or the St. Honoré cake (pictured), made with puff pastry filled with pastry cream and topped with homemade Chantilly cream, caramelized sugar, and hot dark chocolate. (561-360-2224, theparisianrestaurant.com) —Kerry Shorr